

WHITE FRAGILITY AND RACIAL RESILIENCY:

Building Capacity Across the Racial Divide

Wednesday, April 1, 2020 | 12:00–4:00pm

NYU Skirball Center, 566 LaGuardia Pl., New York, NY

Join MPG Consulting and NYU Silver for this special event featuring two compelling keynotes

DR. KENNETH V. HARDY, PH.D.
Voicelessness: Dilemmas of Silence, Dilemmas of Speaking

Dr. Hardy is a Professor of Family Therapy at Drexel University and Director of the Eikenberg Institute for Relationships. His clinical work centers on issues including the anatomy of racial rage, learned voicelessness, and the invisible wounds of racial oppression. His talk will explore the phenomenon of oppression-induced Voicelessness among People of Color, and examine the emotional, psychological, and spiritual effects it has on the everyday lives of the racially traumatized. Strategies for reclaiming one's voice will be discussed.

DR. ROBIN DIANGELO, PH.D.
Nothing to Add: Silence as a Function of White Fragility

Dr. DiAngelo is an antiracist educator, consultant, trainer, and author of White Fragility: Why It's So Hard For White People To Talk About Racism. Her talk will address the racially insular social environment of white people in the U.S. and how that builds expectations for racial comfort while at the same time lowering stamina for enduring racial stress, i.e., "White Fragility." She will focus on one particular manifestation of White Fragility: silence in the face of racial injustice, and provide perspectives and skills white people need to build their racial stamina and use the voice their position provides.
